

The Daily Collegian

New England's Largest College Daily online

Front Page
INTERACT
Login
Email Edition
About Us
Forums
Podcasts
Syndication
Letter to the Editor
Classifieds
Ad Rates
Archives
Search
SPECIAL ISSUES
The Score 2007 Online
UMass YakBack
BLOGS
News Blog
Sports Blog
Arts & Living Blog
LINKS
UMass Amherst
Amherst Wire
CampusLIVE
College Publisher
PRINT PDF
COLLEGIAN RESOURCES
Sovereign Bank
Home > News

UMass groups lends a hand in Kenya

Matt Rocheleau, Collegian Staff

Issue date: 9/12/08 Section: News

Print
Email

< prev Page 2 of 2

Construction was focused on building another spring box and improving some projects done by EWB in past visits.

"The work we had done the previous year was well maintained in some places and not so well maintained in others," said Tobiason, who had also gone on the Jan. 2007 trip.

Namely, wooden fence posts installed to protect the spring boxes had rotted or been knocked over by livestock. The group built new fences and mended old ones using steel posts held by concrete.

Although there was work to be done, the trip was also about interacting with the people of Namawanga.

"They are possibly some of the friendliest people I've ever met in my life," said Border.

"While one of us was working, the other would often be found taking pictures and giggling with the children in the village, making sure to display the pictures after taking them so that people could see what they looked like on the camera," reads the group's blog.

The group got to experience the Kenyan culture, eating foods like ugali, mashed bananas, rice, chipati and chicken. Both Tobiason and Stauber felt the villagers were very hospitable and kept everyone well fed.

"The food was excellent. I can't eat the D.C. food anymore after eating there," Border said.

Though the Kenyans spoke English - in addition to Swahili and their local language Bukusu - the difference in accents, as well as culture, made communication difficult at times, said Stauber.

Stauber recalls work being done on a spring box while her group was preparing to pour concrete for fence posts. A villager named Patrick was digging a deep trench and Bakuli was chopping wood. What stood out for Stauber was how cool it was to watch a group with such unique backgrounds working together.

As she described it, she was in Kenya alongside Americans, Kenyans and Bakuli who was returning to his native Kenya from America. Everyone was "putting their whole hearts into the work," said Stauber.

The proudest moment for Border was watching the water begin to come through the pipes on the spring box the group constructed.

"The best thing was to see the work we actually did pull through," he said.

Stauber said another special moment for her was reading the thank you notes given to them by a Kenyan man before the group left. One woman showed thanks by giving the group painted gourds.

Despite the Kenyans' thanks, the group knows there is more to be done. Their main objective is to drill a permanent well, said Stauber, but the group is $8,000 shy of the $20,000 needed.

According to Stauber and Tobiason, the EWB will be returning to the village next year, though no date has been picked. Stauber said several of the most recent group's members, including her and Border, plan to go on the next trip.

Matt Rocheleau can be reached at mrochele@student.umass.edu.

< prev Page 2 of 2

POLL

This month, UMass Chaplain Kent Higgins was reprimanded by the University for offering credits to students for their participation in the Obama campaign. Should a state university offer credits to students for partisan campaigning?

- Yes -- it encourages educated citizenship.
- No -- it compromises the University's ethic.
- It's all the same to me.

View Results

24 Hour News

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian has an 'open door' policy with regards to reader comments. In the interest of facilitating an open discourse, comments are not screened or edited for spelling, mechanics or content. Comments on our website cannot be verified by The Collegian and in no way represent the opinions of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian or its staff.

Be the first to comment on this story

Name: (required)

Email: (required)

NOTE: Email address will not be published

Website:

Notify me of followup comments via e-mail

Type your comment below (html not allowed)

I am not posting spam. I understand posting spam or other comments that are unrelated to this article will cause my comment to be flagged for deletion and possibly cause my IP address to be permanently banned from this server.

News

Pagan pride '08
 Drum Corps leader honored
 Library evacuation forces study break
 NPHC hosts 'Meet the Greeks' Event
 Real Talk: Black in America

Arts & Living

Voices of Guantanamo Bay to haunt Amherst
 Students' guide to English pubs
 Pinback ready to dominate
 Sci-fi "Eagle Eye" full of action and explosions

Editorial / Opinion

In Mass., it's a 'green' ballot
 Invisible campaigning
 SGA, student apathy
 Unresponsible hospitals

Sports

COMMENTARY: Minutemen can't find net
 UM struggles to capitalize
 Minutemen return to McGuirk after bye
 Salvaggione nets game winners
 Beam leads 49er's

