

The Daily Collegian

New England's Largest College Daily online

Front Page

INTERACT

Login

Email Edition

About Us

Forums

Podcasts

Syndication

Letter to the Editor

Classifieds

Ad Rates

Archives

Search

SPECIAL ISSUES

The Score 2007 Online

UMass YakBack

BLOGS

Sports Blog

Arts & Living Blog

Ed-Op Blog

LINKS

UMass Amherst

Amherst Wire

CampusLIVE

College Publisher

PRINT PDF

COLLEGIAN PARTNERS

Student Checking Account

Writing Coach

Home > News

Iraq vet speaks out

Former soldier discusses desertion

Matt Rocheleau, Collegian Staff

Issue date: 11/7/08 Section: News

  Email

 < prev Page 2 of 3 next >

At the time, Mejía said he tried to tell himself what the lieutenant had done was permissible because the boy learned not to antagonize U.S. soldiers, but later realized there was no justification for what had happened.

"[Instances like this] destroy the moral fabric of a society," said Mejía. "These are the things we, as soldiers, don't think about until we come home. You don't have the luxury to think morally about things. It's too intense. It's too dangerous."

When he returned home for a two-week leave, Mejía said he had time to discover how he truly felt about the war.

"It became clear to me that I had to make a decision to follow my idea of right versus wrong or to follow my military commands," he said.

Mejía said his decision not to return to service after his leave was not easy and he was afraid.

"I didn't have the courage to speak out," he said. "I simply didn't get back on the plane."

Eventually, Mejía said he felt he could not remain silent. He said the hypocrisy of the "support the troops" motto was one reason he began talking to the media.

Soldiers were not being adequately supplied on the battlefield or treated properly when their service ended, Mejía said.

Meanwhile, "these billions of dollars a week were basically lining the pockets of corporate CEOs," he said.

In March 2004, Mejía surrendered to being AWOL at the Army Air Force base in Lexington. He was court-martialed and convicted of desertion by a military jury who sentenced him to a year in military prison and gave him a bad conduct discharge.

A desertion conviction during wartime can result in a death sentence, under Article 85 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

While in prison, Mejía said he enjoyed the time he had to reflect on his service in Iraq and plan for what he wanted to do after his release.

"Being a deserter or conscientious objector in military prison is like being a bank robber in civilian jail," said Mejía. "The other inmates gave me mad respect."

Continued...

< prev Page 2 of 3 next >

Article Tools

Share:

 Facebook  Blogger  del.icio.us  digg  newsvine

Subscribe:

 My Yahoo!  Google

POLL

What kind of dog should president-elect Barack Obama get for his family?

- Bichon Frise
- Chinese Crested
- Miniature Schnauzer
- Poodle
- Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier

Submit Vote

View Results

24 Hour News

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian has an 'open door' policy with regards to reader comments. In the interest of facilitating an open discourse, comments are not screened or edited for spelling, mechanics or content. Comments on our website cannot be verified by The Collegian and in no way represent the opinions of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian or its staff.

Be the first to comment on this story

Name: (required)

Email: (required)

NOTE: Email address will not be published

Website:

Notify me of followup comments via e-mail

Type your comment below (html not allowed)

I am not posting spam. I understand posting spam or other comments that are unrelated to this article will cause my comment to be flagged for deletion and possibly cause my IP address to be permanently banned from this server.

News

Atwood captivates the FAC
Experts predict snowy winter
Iraq vet speaks out
Teach for America recruits grads-to-be for employment

Arts & Living

Shakespeare troupe to play UMass
'Zach & Miri' make a so-so
American Ale to yield tart results

Editorial / Opinion

Bigotry preventing change
Feeding the hungry with a meal plan
Speech deja vu
Gay marriage: a divorce between church and state

Sports

Men's Soccer: Minutemen reach for tourney
Men's Soccer: DeNormandie comes up big
Two guys, one column
Field Hockey: Orlando earns Atlantic 10 POY
Women's Basketball: Minutewomen to host Bishop's University
Swimming & Diving: UMass goes for third-straight sweep

Features

Merry-go-round reminder of years past

Multimedia

SLIDESHOW: Election at UMass

National College Advertising and Marketing | Privacy Policy (8/15/07) | Terms of Use (4/28/08)
Content Submission Agreement (8/23/07) | Copyright Compliance Policy (8/25/07) | RSS Terms of Use

